! Hazards

- The nohoanga site, as with the community of Ōkārito, is prone to flooding at times. Generally flooding occurs with heavy or prolonged rainfall, or if the estuary backs up with water. Controlled routine openings of the river mouth / estuary are in place to reduce this type of flooding. Check weather forecasts before going to Ōkārito nohoanga site and be prepared to leave quickly should unexpected heavy rainfall occur.
- There is an airstrip located next to the nohoanga site, the end of the strip is located at the north-western corner of the nohoanga boundary. It is marked by white painted boundary markers on the ground. Caution should be taken if aircraft are using the airstrip.
- Visit the Ngāi Tahu website www.ngaitahu.iwi.nz/environment/nohoanga for information regarding hazards.
